Aims and objectives of the programme.

Political Science is a discipline, which applies theories, concepts, and methods to the study of political phenomena. It also uses historical and philosophical perspectives to understand political problems and policy issues. People around the world debate give speeches; write letters blogs, vote and care passionately about politics. The academic discipline of political science also reflects this excitement Even though Political Scientist cannot make law like statements as the physical statements make they do strive to develop probabilistic or conditional statements of cause and to develop a systematic understanding about political system.

Principal aims and objectives of the program are:-

- To identify key questions, fundamental concepts, and theoretical frameworks critical to an understanding of political theory.
- To solve complex problems by demonstrating a mastery of substantive knowledge in the disciplines sub-fields.
- To follow scientific and humanistic methods to design and carry out politically oriented research projects by utilizing sufficiently advanced social research methods.
- To communicate effectively political knowledge to general audiences as well as colleagues in the field.

The syllabi of Kannur University revised by the board of studies in Political Science (UG). The Board has conducted five days workshop to develop a new curriculum. The work shop managed to develop a new curriculum that can impart a new professionalism and give insight to the newly emerged activities. A curriculum design committee was formed under the leadership of members of the Board of studies. A good number of teachers and academicians within and outside the state contributed their knowledge, experience and service to its academic exercise. The present system is the result of restructuring endeavor and its prominent features are Semestrisation, Choice Based Credit Programs, and Interdisciplinarity Continuous Evaluation, Grading and such student oriented academic innovations.
